

Increased Pregnancy Rates with Embryo Health Testing Exclusively Available at Repromed

BeEst embryo selection technology is now exclusively available for all patients at Repromed.

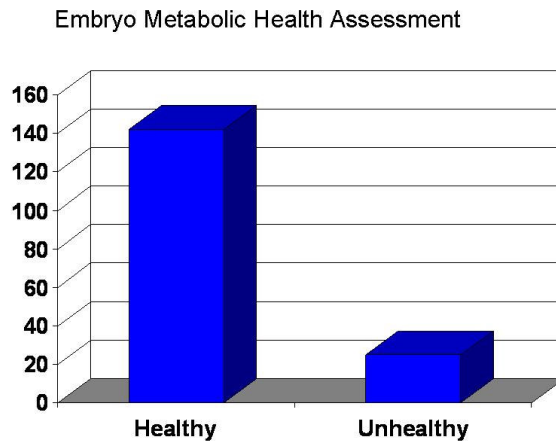

Rather than simply looking at your embryos our newly developed technology allows us to more accurately pick the best embryo for transfer based on its metabolic health.

This technology has been reported to significantly increase pregnancy rates.

This technology is only available in South Australia at Repromed.

This service is provided at no extra cost.

We test the solution that your embryo has been bathed in to determine the type and quantity of nutrients consumed by the embryo. Therefore, this is completely non-invasive and does not disturb the embryos.

Based on n>200 embryos

This has been developed as part of Repromed's ongoing research and development program lead by its internationally renowned Scientists.

Repromed's scientists are constantly improving techniques, based on the latest research and innovations, to provide our patients with the very best chance of success. If you have any questions about these changes as it relates to your treatment feel free to email our scientists on embryolab@repromed.com.au
